Learning Logs: Reflection Prompts

Use two or more Reflection Prompts to explain new information or process.

1. Which of the textbooks you are using this year is the most difficult for you to understand? Analyze what it is about that particular text that makes it hard to comprehend.
2. Which story or text passage we read during this unit has you found the most interesting? Explain your answer.
3. One topic we have studied during this unit is _____. Why do you think this topic has been included as part of this course?
4. Write about the importance of _____ (idea or concept you have read about) to the world in general, and to you in your particular career choice.
5. Write about an idea or concept in the text that confuses you. What is it that you find particularly hard to understand? What could you do to gain a better understanding of this idea or concept?
6. Summarize the text material we read in class today. Explain how it relates to you or reminds you of information or skills you have learned elsewhere.
7. Write a letter to the editor of the school paper in which you argue for or against a controversial issue we have studied this year.
8. Write about an upcoming test or quiz. List the questions that you think might be asked, and develop answers for each.
9. Consider how your opinions have changed as a result of what we have studied during this unit. How have class discussions, reading, or class activities influenced the way you think about the topic of the unit?
10. Discuss what we have been reading with a specific audience--a teenager from another time period, a young child, and a new student.
